Key Takeaways

- Women were not born quiet
- We don't call it self-silencing; we call it being easy to work with.
- Silence doesn't protect us. It erases us.
- The price of silence costs more than you think.
- We don't find our voices. We unmute them.

SIGNATURE TALK

UNMUTED: How Women Reclaim Their Power When They Stop Staying Quiet

Most women don't lose their voice. They just forget they still have one.

UNMUTED is a keynote about the invisible ways women are taught to make themselves smaller, and what becomes possible the moment they stop. Delivered with humor, personal storytelling, and the kind of honesty that makes a room go quiet before it starts laughing, this talk doesn't give women something new. It reminds them of something they already knew.

You don't find your voice. You unmute it.

“Her enthusiasm, warmth, storytelling, and calming presence made it impossible not to listen.”

—Kathryn Colleen Bennett
